Friends of Seedtime,

“Wish you were here” Gets a rewrite

Oh, how I hoped to write a Newsletter this week. I would love to announce the next trip into Haiti to teach God’s Word. Then a short time later write back to you saying “Wish you were here!”

Every two months we publish a Newsletter with 2 pages and it is time for such very soon. In between the Newsletters we publish a brief one page Update. I wanted a Newsletter to announce some conclusion in the matter of Haiti’s gas shortages, and worse, the mobs in the streets destroying the little that Haiti has. That resolution has not happened. So today, you get a brief Seedtime Update.

Frantz reports that UN troops that had pulled out from years of occupation, are coming back to Haiti beginning October 15th. Some gasoline supplies have trickled into the country and the very next news report said that Haiti looked liked it had totally calmed down. Only days later, they were back to burning things all around the country.

Yesterday Frantz sent this photo. It is from Saint-Marc, a very large city in the center of Haiti’s breadbasket. It is both a port city and a farming community hub.

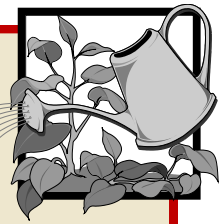

The building on fire is a bank. The money inside is neither good nor bad. The “Love of money”, however is what bites most of us.

There is a percentage of people in Haiti who have responded well to our Bible classes, where we reason with them according to the scriptures. What starts with a love for money changes to a love for God’s wisdom. We then happily write home to you saying “Wish you were here!”

Today is not that day. The story of today, the desperate violence, will be remembered as a contrast to God’s more peaceful and productive path. More of Haiti will read about this in our Bible study somewhere down the road.

Please pray for that day to come soon.

Jeremiah 8:22

Is there no balm in Gilead?
Is there no physician there?
Why then has the health of the daughter of my people not been restored?

Honestly, we will be very pleased to see peace restored in Haiti, not by UN troops. That will be temporary.

Won’t it be pleasing to see a Haitian lead the way, speaking God’s counsel and the people responding?
We have planted much Seed in Haiti.
We long for the harvest.
