Friends of Seedtime,

He said it out loud

Frantz, I know what you teach is in the Bible, but too many of our church members have already borrowed money to start their small businesses. This teaching would offend them.

This is the paraphrased answer from a Pastor in Haiti after Frantz recently dropped by to discuss conducting Seedtime's Bible study in their Christian church.

Perhaps this Pastor said out loud what other Pastors finally thought about when they canceled classes at the last minute. We can't say for sure but that could explain why 2 out of 3 Pastors cancel our scheduled Bible studies.

Trying to avoid this, Frantz is careful to show church leadership the materials he uses before he teaches.

As a Christian ministry in Haiti a person might think we deal with voodoo and similar crazy things. Sometimes yes, but mostly we just deal with Christians, leaders and members both... helping them to know their Bible and it's contrast with the world we live in.

Frantz continues to offer Bible studies and introductions to Bible studies both inside and outside the Christian church in Haiti. Your support in prayer and finances allows us to continue.

February 9th is the beginning of Frantz' effort to take the studies outside of church controls. No Pain No Gain is the name of the school Frantz is working with to offer our Bible study in a place where Pastors can't close it down.

No, it's not revolutionary, but it may help avoid cancellations.

Latest news from Haiti...

Protests have erupted yet again, including in Port-de-Paix, where Frantz is currently scheduled for Bible studies Feb 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. Now, all of them are possibly postponed given massive crowds in the streets with some throwing rocks and cutting tires. Businesses are closed and Frantz said it is once again a very rough time in Haiti... please pray.

Protests are centered on the public's demand for Haiti's Prime Minister to vacate his office since his time has officially expired. That, coupled with the PM's inability to get elections held, while appearing reluctant to even make progress... has infuriated the country.
